

Groundwater vulnerability maps are currently being produced for the UK as a tool to aid decision making regarding land use. The maps classify the hazard to groundwater in an underlying aquifer posed by a contaminant load on the ground surface. Their role in assessing the potential impact of contaminated land on groundwater is reviewed.