The Biological Records Centre is operated by the Institute of Terrestrial Ecology (Natural Environment Research Council) and receives financial support from the Nature Conservancy Council. It seeks to help naturalists and research biologists to co-ordinate their efforts in studying the occurrence of plants and animals in the British Isles, and to make the results of these studies available to others.

MAMMAL SOCIETY DISTRIBUTION SURVEY

Since the publication of the Provisional Atlas in 1978, a good deal of work has been done on the distribution of the mammals, and many new records have been received by the organiser.

However, some species are still badly under-recorded, especially small mammals and bats. This set of maps has been produced as a final stimulus to recorders.

The recording scheme has been running since 1965; it will soon be time to call a halt and assess the future of mammal recording. The present scheme will end in 1985 and final maps will be published as soon as possible, probably in 1986.

Please make every effort to fill in gaps during the next two seasons, and if you are aware of any errors, please let me know.

Record cards are freely available from BRC.
